Inferior tea keepings teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh boiling water. After six minutes strain liquid into two quart containers. While hot, add 1/2 cups of granulated sugar and the juice of 2 lemons. Stir well until sugar is dissolved. When cooled add cold water. Do not allow tea to form ice cubes in the cold water; otherwise liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice.

Protect Wild Life

This is an age of organization. Men and women, boys and girls, band themselves together in clubs, associations, unions, large or small, some single isolated groups others as branches of a Provincial, Dominion, or international body. There are clubs to promote almost every conceivable thing or object, in which mankind can possibly be interested. These number is legion, and new organizations spring into existence almost every week.

There are organizations for the promotion of health, for the protection of members, and very definite objects to serve. They have long occupied useful and honorable places in our democracy, command the respect of all, and have made worthwhile contributions to society as a whole. Members of such bodies are banded together, as a rule, in support of some great principle to which they are intensely dedicated.

There are organizations which exist solely to bring about the spread of temporarily prevailing conditions, and when those conditions change and pass away, these organizations pass out of existence, some having exerted a beneficial influence in the direction of reform and progress; others leaving little but a trail of disillusionment and loss behind them.

It would be impossible to even list, let alone classify, the organizations now existing in Canada, and the scope of the public interest it is not the intention of this article to make so much as attempt. Rather at this time, it is proposed to direct attention to one particular organization, to which no great publicity has been given in past years, but which has been engaged in quietly, but none the less effectively, promoting a cause in which the people of Canada ought to take a very keen and active interest. On former occasions the attention of readers of this column has been drawn to other worthwhile organizations, consequently in now singling out one specific organization for a word of commendation we are making no new departure.

The organization now referred to—possibly we should refer to it in the plural and say organizations—are the Fish and Game clubs or leagues of the various provinces. These organizations are proving wide, and are destined to spread along the land, and will not have all the allure of wild life, whether they hunt with a gun or a camera, or the notebook of the scientist, for in the final analysis, the interests of these have been drawn to other worthwhile organizations, consequently in now singling out one specific organization for a word of commendation we are making no new departure.

The organization now referred to—possibly we should refer to it in the plural and say organizations—are the Fish and Game clubs or leagues of the various provinces. These organizations are proving wide, and are destined to spread along the land, and will not have all the allure of wild life, whether they hunt with a gun or a camera, or the notebook of the scientist, for in the final analysis, the interests of these have been drawn to other worthwhile organizations, consequently in now singling out one specific organization for a word of commendation we are making no new departure.

The objects of these organizations are to promote wild life research; by an educational campaign to instill into the minds of people the cardinal rules and laws of nature and the necessity of giving to nature the assistance of the law of the land. The Fish and Game clubs are the organizations which comes from plenty can continue to exist; to see that the passage of the necessary laws to prevent extinction of declining species and to ensure the rigid observance of those laws; to endeavor to maintain the necessary surface water supply, natural cover, trees and food conducive to a bountiful supply of useful wild life, and to control or eliminate those of its enemies which threaten its continued existence.

Finally, and perhaps the most important object it will be seen that, in protecting them, these organizations are likewise promoting the welfare of all, irrespective of whether they are directly interested in the preservation of wild bird and animal life or not. For example, agriculturists and livestock men, in recent years, have seen the wisdom and necessity of conserving the natural resources brought close home to them. Equally so, is the wisdom and necessity of protecting trees from wholesale destruction in order that one of the main sources of surface water supplies should not likewise be destroyed.

As a people we have devoted far too little thought and study to the many forces and factors really balanced by nature to make this world a happy, healthy, productive and peaceful land, and we have paid little heed to our ignorance to do more than what have been done to our own benefit and dire result, and at a tremendous cost and enormous loss to ourselves and our country. We must work with nature with knowledge and understanding, not in direct opposition to nature, if we are to survive and prosper.

Apart, therefore, from the attractiveness which an abundance and great variety of wild animal, bird and fish life gives to any country, the natural environment which we live in will possess an ideal set of the conditions which give birth to a content and happy life, which may be regarded as the basic foundation upon which the productivity of the land rests, for without water and natural shelter the land would become a desert.

For these reasons, among others, Canadians should support organizations like the Fish and Game Clubs, if not by engagement as active members themselves, at least by giving them sympathetic support and cooperation in achieving the objects for which such organizations exist. In a word, every Canadian should be a protector of Canada's wild life, and alert and ready to assist in maintaining those natural conditions which alone make wild life possible.

Muss Import Grain

Manchuria Will Negate Extra Supplies To Feed Farmers

For the first time in many years, Manchuria will, this year, have to import grain in order to keep its own 30,000,000 people fed.

Because of lack of rain, it is feared that the 1935 crop of wheat and rice grown will be a failure, except in favored districts, and already the government of Manchukuo has made arrangements to import 50,000 tons of rice from Saigon, Rangoon and Bangkok. Additional large imports are contemplated.

The people of Manchukuo, not rice eaters, like the Chinese farther south. They sublist normally upon mostly millet and kaoliang, a species of maize.

Shorter Men For Army

British Regulations Fix Minimum Height For Infantry At Five Feet, Two Inches

The British army is to be shorter. Recruiting regulations issued recently fix the minimum height for infantry at five feet two inches. This is an inch below the old minimum. Canadian and Indian tank corps, Royal Engineers, army service corps may all accept recruits one inch below the minimum previously stipulated, provided they are otherwise qualified.

The war office is determined, in view of the dearth of recruits, to bring the army up to full establishment.

The larger a bird happens to be, the longer its life span.

A WORLD OF FLAVORLatest Method Detects Fingerprints On Cloth

Will Preserve Them Indefinitely After They Are Found

A new technique capable of developing fingerprints left on cloth—much as it is possible to do with paper—has been added to the New York police department's bag of tricks.

The method, an indirect product of the Hauptman case, includes the important accomplishment of preserving the original prints after they are found. Chemical baths bring out and fix the prints.

Shortly after the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped, Dr. Ernest M. Hudson, a chemist in the hobby community who makes fingerprints a hobby, was called to Hopewell, N.J., to examine the ladder used in the crime.

Using an iodine process, he found 500 prints where police had found none previously by the powder-dusting method. Incidentally, none of the prints was identified.

Dr. Hudson was invited to direct the New York police department's crime-fighting research in this field. The prints were silver in color and could be distinguished from other prints of light shade, and calcium sulphide on darker fabrics, followed.

The treatment brings chemical transformation of body salts in the wash of which fingerprints are made, so that they appear to become apparent to the eye. The prints may be several years old.

The new technique is superior to the currently widespread method of dusting suspected surfaces with colored powder, because it is said, because the powder-dusting is effective only when the wax is fresh.

Strange InventionsWeird Army Gadgets At Chicago

Termed by their own president as "nuts," the gadgets of the 11th annual national inventors congress brought to Chicago a strange array of things, some horseshoe-shaped and some of things which cannot be named.

Among things which attracted spectators who viewed the exhibits of 700 inventors and 3,500 manufacturers and distributors were "bully bassinet," a pneumatic ladder, and a hen's nest which separated layers from each other.

Another lay an ege which automatically releases a hatch which allows her to stroll out into the yard where the layers frolic. No eggs?

The only door open to biddy is the one she has made for herself, and another yard which has bad men come to gather chicken for them.

"Many inventors are nuts, as I am," said Albert G. Burns, of Oakland, Cal., president of the congress. "But don't forget it's the nuts who generate ideas which develop into inventions."

The home life sector also saw the "bully bassinet" which, at the turn of an electric switch, provides remote control rocking for baby.

Grading Garret WheatTo Identify Grain Elevators For Loss Sustained

An appropriation of $1,500,000 apportioned in supplemental legislation to the Department of Commerce to indemnify grain elevators which suffered loss through the separate grading of Garret wheat.

The change in grading is to come into force on August 1, 1935, and the regulation will effectuate in an amendment to be made in an amendment to the Canada Grain Act passed last year.

Supplementary estimates amounting to $16,362,978 were introduced by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes. Outside of additional appropriations for port works, the department securing the largest vote is national defence, for which more than $8,000,000 is asked.

Battle With ReptileNoted Traveller Secures Fine Specimen Of King Cobra

Lawrence T. Gridwood, noted ornithologist who has headed a number of expeditions for the Smithsonian Institute and National Zoological Park of Washington, D.C., arrived at Victoria recently with a fine specimen of the king cobra, which he said, neatly took his life.

One night in the Philippine Islands Gridwood awakened suddenly to find the giant cobra ready to strike. He diverted its attention by throwing a rattle snake and then with other members of the party killed it. The reptile measured better than 10 feet in length.

Airport Now ObsoleteThousands Of Dollars Being Spent To Make Aerodrome Obsolete

Improvements and extensions costing thousands of dollars are being made to Croydon Aerodrome to cope with the growth in air traffic.

When Croydon was equipped as a main airport at a cost of $1,500,000 in 1928, it was considered adequate for all parts of Europe, the Empire and South America.

In seven years the airport has become too small for its job, although nearly all the home airmen have been transferred to Heston and Eastcote.

The layout of the buildings is to be altered and extended to speed up the examination of baggage and passports. Passengers who have flown from Paris in one and a half hours will be speeded up to 20 minutes for this inspection.

When the alterations are completed in two months passports will be inspected while baggage is unloaded from the airliner.

Methods of simplifying the loading and unloading of baggage to and from motor coaches will be used.

An Interesting ExhibitDevelopment Of Transportation Shown In Many Working Models

From a chariot of ancient Rome, the development, up to the present day, of transportation on land, on sea and in the air, was depicted in a transportation exposition at Saint John, N.B.

Hundreds of working models showed the growth of all means of transportation from the crude vehicle of long-ago to the vastly improved and more beautiful machines of to-day.

A feature of the indoor exhibition was a model of a section of Saint John river and part of the harbor with tiny ships anchored within, and a group of 74 pictures of sailing vessels famous in the early days of Saint John.

At Union station the latest steam-locomotives were on exhibition in their "Sunday best," while at Saint John airport a fleet of Canada's speediest and most up-to-date aeroplanes was shown.

South Pole Tourist TradeMay Be Winter Sports Playground For Australians In Future

The South Pole, or rather the ice barrier 700 miles this side of it, is described as the winter sports playground of Australia in the future.

The pole is about 3,100 miles from Melbourne and the barrier 2,400 miles. The imaginative with an eye on the future, looking long-distance air travel, see the possibility of the coming day indulging in snow sports under the shadow of the active volcanoes of Erebus and Terror hunting seal, catching penguins, going kayaking among the bergs and going on morning sled trips into the blizzard.

Sir Douglas Dawson, Australian explorer, especially has been sketching prospects for development of the Antarctic, including possibilities of initiating a seal fur trade, canning of penguin eggs and the opening of a winter sports ground.

Gilder Picked Up Wireless

Wireless messages were received in a gilder over Dunstable in mail for the first time in England. Mr. G. E. Collins, who made the British wireless gilding record, made the experiment, and he said afterwards that it was highly satisfactory.

"Solomon," said Mr. Isaac to his son, "I have decided to insure your life."

"Solomon looked up piteously. "Fadder," he said, "vy must I buy?"

The war office is to take your life.

"It's not the cutting I mind, Miss Columbine," Aurora corrected, appearing through one door as the boys came in another, "but seeing it disappear so—so rapidly! You move the knife, you cut the cake, then turn, and I'll set it right here on the centre table. It's a handsome cake, I think you'll all agree. Shall I do the cutting, Miss Columbine? I declare, it seems almost a pity."

"What do you mean? That cake is for me?" snapped Miss Columbine. "A parlor ornament?" Nancy smiled though the phrase sounded unpleasantly familiar. "Cut the thing myself, or these young folks will eat it all up before I can get home, and shut your eyes if you can't bear to look upon such desecration."

"You don't need to cut 'em so thick," remonstrated the anxious woman, hovering near. "That's a boy's enough for any one. These Adam boys" (she spoke as if the young men were not present) "have got fierce appetites when they go places, which is no fault of their mother, but what you can't blame the cook and oven to it herself, so there's no occasion for hard feelings." If Nancy eats big wedges now, Miss Columbine she won't have any appetite for supper."

This was surely nothing shy about this young man, thought Nancy, as he extended a friendly hand to all of them (not omitting Aurora); lifted his third slice of cake from the platter, and said: "I'll be in-to-morrow and see if you've got acclimated."

To all appearances he was addressing Jack; but his eyes were on Nancy; and Aurora burst out as Nancy, as she extended a friendly hand to all of them (not omitting Aurora); lifted his third slice of cake from the platter, and said: "I'll be in-to-morrow and see if you've got acclimated."

"This is Aurora, Tubbs, my dears, whom you have heard me mention. Goodness knows what I'd have done without her all these long weeks."

"Please to shoo out," said Aurora, smiling and shaking hands with Jack first to the right of the automobile. "And you too, Nancy. Might as well come in and sit down. You're wearing a fur coat, but aren't your legs moist in silk stockings?"

I'll take that bag, Miss Columbine. Mark Adam, you set that box of canned stuff on my kitchen table, please. Come in, Jack and Nancy, and make yourselves at home. Here's mine, good to you. See you brought me."

Nancy found herself a little breathless, not entirely the effect of altitude. She had expected to see her hostess was the part of hostess! It was very confusing. Nancy was more than Nancy was like Aurora Tubbs! There was certainly something to explain here, and—

He wheeled about at a crisp command, surprising everyone.

"Get up, Jack! Time enough to get acquainted with Pike's Peak after you're settled. I want to show you your rooms before it gets dark. Bring those bags along and we'll go right up. I dare say you're used to electric lights, but candles and lamps are all I can provide you with. Don't bring your coat, Nancy. It's warm in the entry, though it's cold here and will be till next spring. The stairs are steep, though certain steps are stone. Father built the mansion, and he wanted the best. There's the tower room, my dear, and I hope you like it. There isn't a finer view for miles around."

Having introduced Columbine to his son, Mark Adam, he turned to his wife. "I am sure you'll be starting along home. These young folks will want to begin unpacking, and I'll get some good, fine cotton sheets for you."

"I advise you getting into the double quick. Do you travel all the way from Massachusetts in that dress? It looks real fresh. If you'll give me your trunk key I'd advise you getting into the double quick."

"No doubt you would," spoke up Cousin Columbine, "but it's rather late now. Your brother is I was a widow woman and he only made creature comforts in Pine Ridge. He's got a rich nature, Mark Adam has, and I've always said, give me a faithful man none at all. Help yourself to anything you like. You'll be starting along home. These young folks will want to begin unpacking, and I'll get some good, fine cotton sheets for you."

"Come in, every one!" said Cousin Columbine, stepping down from the Ford with youthful agility. "Turn to the left, and go into my sitting room. There's a sofa, and a chair, and a cold weather. The carpet came from Chicago in 1880—the first carpet in Pine Ridge. I'll have you know, Mark Adam, you and Matthew carry those trunks right up, please. It is yours, and you'll want to be sure."

Put it in the lower room, Mark, and the other in the north-east chamber, Aurora, bring in the chocolate cake."

"Not my beautiful fresh cake, Miss Columbine!" protested the woman in Soviet Armenia. "But it's rather late now. You were thinking about our supper. Aurora. Better take more cake to munch on the way home, boys; and here's a couple of dollars. Give them to the boys."

"What for?" asked Mark, puzzled by the proffered money.

"For carting those trunks, and us, you donkey," she replied.

"Great thundering prairie doggs!" exploded Mark. "I'll be taking for pair of pants, and a pair of shoes. Miss Columbine, Matt, we'll be taking on. Matt, we'll be getting along. The lady wants to pay us for a little matter of lifting trunks!"

"The cake was pay enough, Miss Columbine," said Matthew, handing her with a smile. "We would think of taking any money. We would just run along now or we won't get home in time to milk. Good-night—good-night, everybody," he added, and hurrying to escape, collared with a vengeful look.

This caused still further confusion, the young man apologizing, his face scarlet; and Aurora demanding to know why he didn't look where he was going.

"I'm not so small he had to tell me in the landscape," she complained as Matthew vanished, his face pink with embarrassment, a wedge of the precious cake in hand.

"If that's a third slice of cake you're cutting for yourself, Mark Adam, you might as well go eat on the porch. I won't be accountable for how you'll feel come midnight. That's a rich cake; richer common because of company. If you don't hurry Matthew will get home first with all the news."

"I'm not so small he had to tell me in the landscape," she complained as Matthew vanished, his face pink with embarrassment, a wedge of the precious cake in hand.

The depressed price of farm products is a problem with which everyone is familiar, but on the 1913 basis farm product prices have never been as low as gasoline. Between 1913 and 1920 gasoline did not rise in price to nearly the same extent as farm products, yet since 1920 its price has almost continually declined. The data shown in the graph are based on figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

FAIR LABOR POLICIES BENEFIT THE CONSUMER

WORRY and unhappiness are enemies of efficiency. We have always tried to be efficient and years ago we said, "to the greatest extent possible let us get money and satisfy our needs of the organization out of the minds of every man and woman in our company."

So Imperial Oil has always paid high wages. It set up sickness and death benefits, a pension plan and group insurance. These policies have made it easy for them to share ownership in the Company. It gave them a voice in the discussion of Company polices that directly affect them. It introduced the forty-hour week, thus increasing the number of those who work for the Company.

Efficiency and loyalty are repaying the Company for all these measures. Imperial Oil employees give general satisfaction because they know that they are well treated. They feel secure and this feeling is reflected in their work and in the high quality and low cost of the products they make. The consumer benefits, the employees benefit and the Company benefits by these policies.
